

Market like a Master... Even If You're an Introvert

If you are one of those people whose heart starts racing when someone steps closer... (Not that you're scared they would make a pass at you, but scared that they will actually see you...) You'd know how difficult it is to keep your feet grounded and freeze your straight face...

Meanwhile on the inside your little people (the ones living and working in your brain) are hammering on the exit doors and planning the escape routes. One of those little people slams on the brakes and screams... "Just breathe..."

If you're a millennial, you probably don't have to worry. You can speak to anyone. Before the night is over, your friend in Uzbekistan will know about the awesome social event you attended.

If however you are like me (not a millennial and not even close) and freeze up when it comes time to do any networking, you need help...

The reason why you became a copywriter in the first place was to hide behind a computer every day. There you transform into your alter ego who writes amazing stories and sales letters...

But... You have to market yourself...

You have to land some of these projects where you can be fully immersed and hide for a few weeks...

You have to network...

Is there any way or method to avoid the little people in your brain to slam the filing cabinets when they can't find the correct information to converse with the approaching individual... After all that slamming of the drawers, you will have a great headache to add to the confusion of what has or has not been said in your frozen state.

You might wish for the striking bubbly personality, but now you're stuck with the crazy droopy mouth fuzziness of ... you...

Master copywriter Marcia Yudkin will show you ways to embrace the introvert inside you and still market yourself successfully.

You will have to man up and attend the annual AWAI Bootcamp in order to listen to her great coaching on the topic "Marketing for introverts: Why No One Needs a Personality Transplant To Succeed As A Copywriter."

This will be the last time that you'll have to physically face your fears and attend the AWAI's Bootcamp. After hearing Marcia Yudkin speak, it will come naturally.

And for those that cannot attend the AWAI's Bootcamp, there's a supporting structure to help you proceed in living your writer's life.

Join the Barefoot Writer club.

This elite club will help you improve all the aspects of writing to help you grow your freelance writing business. You'll have live support included in your membership. You never have to do this alone. Gain confidence in your writing and realize that you CAN make a good living as a Writer.

Join us today and see why you don't need the "Personality Transplant" as Marcia calls it.